

Disadvantages of freelancing:

A Freelancer's Perspective

If you're considering freelancing, there are some risks in being your own boss or running your own business. Below are some pitfalls to consider:

You don't have anyone to talk to during break time.

You're not sure if your clients are taking advantage of you.

You don't have officemates to blame.

Your parents still think that you're a bum.

People don't get it when you're busy.

You need to give receipts.

Your vacation time is unpaid.

You have lots of pseudonym.

You're a one day millionaire.

You can't relate on office inside jokes.

You think you have more leisure time, but you don't.

It's difficult to name your own price.

Your parents still give you tasks at home.

There are clients who are notoriously slow in paying.

You need to live up to your client's high expectations.

You're forced to meet a deadline.

Every job has their pros and cons. It's how we handle them that matters. So the next time you hire an offshore staff, show them how much you appreciate what they do.

